1991: A Banner Year for Zoo Babies

Scientists at the National Zoo, supported in important ways by FONZ funding, have worked for years to create and develop breeding programs for some of the world's most rare and endangered animals. This type of work is not only enormously challenging, it is often extremely frustrating as well. Even in the most ideal scenario, there comes a point when scientists can only wait and hope for the best.

The "best" occurred with amazing frequency at the National Zoo in 1991, as Zoo scientists saw an unprecedented number of breeding programs come to fruition. The wondrous results are pictured on the pages of your 1992 ZooGoer calendar. And, as the months pass, FONZ and the National Zoo will continue their work to ensure that 1992 brings as many new arrivals as 1991!
